The Importance of Plants in our life!

We will study the traditional knowledge and customs of people concerning plants and their uses in daily routines to understand the importance of teaching children to grow flowers, vegetables and herbs so they experience first hand about the natural environment with a focus to greening the urban environment. We need to encourage our children to be participants not just spectators in community horticulture and conservation, to love nature and physical activity and develop problem solving skills. We will take a guided tour of the Enid A. Haupt Conservatory. with interactive Seed Exploration: planting and other seed related activities in a Plant Parts Paradise.

Training Topics: 1, 2, 3

Come spend the day in nature in the beautiful and historical New York Botanical Garden, exploring plants and the effect they have in our programs, to encourage the children to plant and care for vegetables and flowers in order to learn about healthy eating and active living. Leave your troubles at home and bring a curious mind and an open heart.

This is a free event for FCCANYS members only. If you are not a current member, join today to take advantage of this members only event.
